2011 Year in Review

Ryther

A Better Life

A Tough Beginning

Even at six years old, “Gavin” still wasn’t able to speak well enough to say what he needed. Due to his behaviors, he spent time in a string of foster homes after years of neglect—his biological mother never really spoke to him and frequently left him alone. When asked about life before Ryther, Gavin said, “I’d probably be in the streets just asking for money or food. I moved a lot, like 24/7. I’ve probably moved more than anybody else in the world. When I went to Ryther I didn’t even know what lunch was... because I never ate lunch before.” At six, Gavin came to one of Ryther’s Sub-Acute Residential Treatment cottages. His impulsivity, low self-esteem and anxiety, combined with his speech delay, were preventing Gavin from succeeding in any regular home setting, let alone in school.

Progress at Ryther

Ryther staff developed a treatment plan for Gavin to help him overcome his complex challenges, including speech therapy. Initially, Ryther gave Gavin the structure, stability and feeling of safety that he needed in order to heal and learn. After Gavin trusted that he would have a predictable schedule, warm meals and security at night, his behaviors began to stabilize. Ryther taught him coping skills to help calm and prompt him to think before acting. Eventually, he recognized his feelings and made good decisions on his own.

The Love of a Family

After eight months, Gavin left Ryther’s cottage, and his adoptive mom, “Meredith,” eagerly began to build a life with him. Meredith also felt a calling to help more children and became a Ryther Hub Home Therapeutic Foster Parent, providing respite and a community for Ryther’s constellation of foster homes. Meredith said that “reading about [Gavin’s] biological mother who had been in foster care since she was seven made me realize we need to break the cycle for so many kids.” Today, Meredith and Gavin are a family. “I’m just so excited to see where he’s going to go as he grows,” Meredith said. “Ryther gave Gavin confidence and the ability to trust people. He definitely sees a future for himself.”

Ten-year-old Gavin happily vocalizes: “Ryther is the most awesome place you can go if you need caring because they always listen and they always help you.”

Message from Ryther Leadership

Overlapping fiscal years of Ryther and its funders often means that important events in one year are more significant in another or subsequent year. In 2010, Ryther spent considerable time and energy in trying to determine its course in the context of an ultimately failed effort in Olympia to restructure child welfare. In the closing days of 2010, it became clear Ryther should not become a “lead agency.”

In the manner of a perfect storm, the State also passed severe reimbursement rate cuts to already inadequate rates to Ryther and others while the demand for those services either remained constant or increased. Ryther had to act quickly which meant restructuring and re-sizing the administration and management of the organization while initiating efforts to generate new revenues.

By September, Ryther still had a deficit to contend with, but the progress being made was unmistakable. Service revenues from private payment sources were increasing at an encouraging rate as marketing and communications efforts began to pay off.

The goal of supporting the charitable mission with self-sustaining service revenues from the private sector has begun to look more and more achievable. While there is some distance to go yet, Ryther is on its way. These advances were achieved while continuing to focus on Ryther’s core competencies and charitable purpose without sacrificing quality or integrity.

We are grateful to all of you who steadfastly supported Ryther through these trying times.

Lee Grogg

Executive Director/CEO

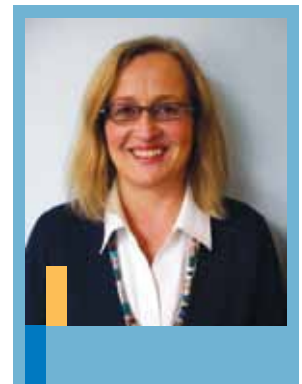

I am so excited about the direction that Ryther is taking into our future. Even as we fight through the uncertainties of the State budget and changes in the child welfare community, Ryther remains steadfast. As we forge ahead we’re continually reaffirming our commitment to and indeed our obligation to serve the most vulnerable children and families in our community. Ryther is renewing itself in exciting ways by broadening our program offerings to utilize the skills and abilities of our incredible staff and serve more children and families in need. We will accomplish our goals because of the support and dedication of our amazing Ryther League and the many volunteers and generous supporting individuals and companies. On behalf of the Board of Trustees I thank our amazing community of support and generous sponsors who believe in our mission and indeed are a part of us as we bring hope to so many who depend on us.

The Ryther Family

The Ryther League

In 2011, the Ryther League's Steering Committee completed their strategic planning process after one year of study that included exercises in visualization and reflection about its future. To that end, Central meetings were reduced in number while opportunities to engage with the children and teens were strengthened. On campus art sessions, bingo, magic shows and haircuts provided by League units gave kids opportunities to smile while off campus pool parties were a special treat. Birthday cakes, cookies, Easter baskets, quilts and the Marion Baer Holiday Store showed children at Ryther how adults in the community can and do care about their well-being. The League's ongoing dedication and strong financial support through many worthwhile and enjoyable events and projects helped support the mission of Ryther. We thank the League for all their hard work and commitment.

Thank you, 2011 Volunteers!

Ryther volunteers make all the difference by connecting with our children and teens and bringing beauty to their surroundings. Many thanks to the organizations that improved our campus: UW's Beta Theta Pi fraternity, Convergent Technologies, Hess Corporation, JE Dunn, Microsoft, Milliman, University Presbyterian Church and Windermere Real Estate Services. In all, there were 638 volunteers in 2011, contributing a combined total of 4,627 hours. We would like to acknowledge those volunteers who spent time with the children and teens, as well as those who helped with special projects:

Thanks to the League, Ryther children and teens can "buy" gifts during the holidays for those most important to them at the Marion Baer Holiday Store.
