Why Sponsor the Ryther Luncheon?

Early intervention can save lives. Each year, Ryther serves over 2,500 young people and their families who struggle with mental and behavioral health through an array of therapeutic services. Washington's Youth Mental Health Crisis...

The average delay between symptom onset of a mental health condition and treatment is 11 years. That means if someone begins experiencing major depression at 14, they are unlikely to receive help until age 25. For a young person, that means suffering for almost half of your entire life before getting the help you need. For many, that means the possibility of treatment comes far too late.

Timely intervention in mental health concerns is paramount. Early detection and treatment not only save lives but also set children on a trajectory towards a brighter future. By supporting Ryther, you ensure young people in our community have the mental health care they need when they need it most.

57.7% of youth with major depression do not receive any mental health treatment.
